To our customers and partners,

As we monitor developments related to coronavirus (Covid-19), we have taken extraordinary measures to assure that our employees continue to be healthy and their families and communities safe. Everyone that can work from home is currently doing so. We have restricted access to our offices, and we are encouraging electronic communications across teams and with our customers.

Our worldwide factories are working within the constraints of their specific regions to continue support for our customers and partners, and protect our supply chain as much as possible. We are working together with our warehouses and delivery services to minimize delays in shipments to our customers, and continue to monitor ports of entry for any deviation in operations.

If you have any questions, or require any help with your orders, do not hesitate to contact your Account Manager or Product Support Associate directly. All office extensions are forwarded to mobile phones to receive your calls. They are able to help you and answer any of your questions.

Thank you for your continued support, and stay healthy and safe.
